Sustainable Development Goals
United Nations
Sustainable Development Goals

Further details @ pzamani@Kennesaw.edu

VIRTUAL Tour
On K Campus
EQUINOX: UN SDG
3:25 PM -
-
-
10:30AM

Presenter:
Organizer:
Sponsored:
This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.

This Equity & the Environment: A student perspective
EQUINOX | Equity & the Environment Academy
hosted by:
Arcadia University and KSU CARE Services [in partnership with
Regional Centre of Expertise on Education for Sustainable Development
Secretariat]

Britte Barnes, a research-based artist whose practice is grounded in the intersections of art, society, and the virtual, will discuss her collaborations and interactions with scientists, technologists, and the general public. She will explore how those engagements supported her inquiry study of the natural world, and the implications of those engagements on environmental education and the role of art in teaching.